The Indian Rebellion of 1857 had made it clear that increased British control was needed. While the rebellion did not immediately grant independence, one of the results was that India began to see itself in stark division with the British. The formation of the Indian National Congress, a group that would go on to play a defining role in achieving independence in the 20th Century was formed in 1885. At the same time, India had become a staging ground through which British institutional constructs could find a home in India. For example, it was during this time period when a Parliamentary style...