Peace Without Promise: Britain And The Peace Conferences, 1919-23

M. L Dockrill; J. Douglas Goold

This study is about British policy at the peace conferences following the First World War that had a crucial influence in shaping the history of Europe and the Middle East. Both authors were close associates of the well known historian of British diplomatic history, the late Professor Cedric Lowe. At the time that they wrote this work Michael Dockrill held the position of lecturer in War Studies at King's College in London and J. Douglas Goold served on the editorial board for the Edmonton Journ.
