Maslow’s hierarchy of needs

Dr. Maslow hypothesized that people are motivated by a hierarchy of needs. Each individual’s needs must be satisfied at the lower levels before they progress to higher, more complex levels. Some of us never get past level 3. Where are you?

article 6: Maslow’s hierarchy, societal change and the knowledge worker revolution.

Andrew Herrington – Pateo Consulting
This article connects Maslow's well known explanation of human actions to the changes that are going on in society at present to make an argument for the way that knowledge workers can best be managed in the interests of achieving the best results for the business. The article provides a background of understanding for developing the tools for leading and motivating Knowledge Workers.

Central is the simple argument that to do what you do well you must be enjoying what you do. Competitive businesses need their employees to be doing what they are doing well in order to prosper in the competitive marketplace.

Maslow's theory describes what people need to be doing to enjoy themselves.

Other material included describes research into knowledge workers attitudes – attitudes that are determined by the developmental status of society. It can be argued that as society has progressed with economic development individuals have climbed Maslow's hierarchy. The latest change ("The Knowledge Worker Revolution") is simply a further progression that is the inevitable result of economic development.

Maslow and the Knowledge Worker Revolution

Dr. Maslow hypothesized that people are motivated by a hierarchy of needs. The hierarchy he described may be drawn as follows:

Maslow's theory requires that:

- Each individual’s needs must be satisfied at the lower levels before they progress to the higher, more complex levels.

- When low-level needs are satisfied, individuals are no longer motivated by them.

- As each level of needs is met, individual’s progress to higher-level motivators.

- All the needs are always present.

It can be reasonably hypothesized (See Sidebar: “Why Knowledge Workers are Self-Actualizing”) that Knowledge Workers must be looking for motivation from the highest levels of the triangle – Self-Actualization.

Maslow described the characteristics of the Self-Actualized Person as follows:

- Are realistically oriented

- Accept other people for what they are

- Are spontaneous in thinking, emotions, and behavior

- Are problem-centered rather than self-centered

- Need privacy
Are autonomous, independent, and able to remain true to themselves in the face of rejection or unpopularity

Have a continuous freshness of appreciation

Have mystic or oceanic experiences although not necessarily religious

Identify with mankind

Have deep meaningful relationships with a few people

Have a democratic structure and judge people as individuals

Have highly developed ethics

Resist total conformity to culture

These characteristics, coupled with the motivational needs described by Maslow (outlined in diagram above), provide some tools for understanding how to motivate Knowledge Workers.

Most Knowledge Workers have no need to worry about their physiological, security, and safety needs, so these basic, low-level needs no longer motivate their actions, although the needs are always present. Many people are today motivated primarily by social, esteem, and self-actualizing needs.

Everyone needs to be loved, to be accepted, and to belong. Individuals join social, religious, fraternal, and educational organizations to fulfill this psychological need.

Esteem needs are a step higher in Maslow's hierarchy. In addition to being merely accepted and belonging, people want to be heard, to be appreciated, and to be wanted. People want to feel important and need status.

At the highest level are self-actualizing needs. People seek to achieve their highest potential through professional, philanthropic, political, educational, and artistic channels. These needs, according to Maslow's concept, become important only when all social and ego needs have been satisfied.

In a team, particularly one with a wide age range, it is likely that individuals' needs will be at various levels on the motivational ladder. Those team members at the highest levels – probably a majority – will probably be motivated by a wider variety of needs than those people at lower stages. Additionally the wide ethnic diversity present in the Knowledge Worker population will increase the variability of factors that will motivate team members.

These three factors leads to the increasing need for people to be treated highly individually if they are to be well motivated. At the same time a highly functioning team

All these factors can add synergistically so that a top quality team, 'on a roll', becomes almost unbeatable. Teams operating at this high performance level represent the peak in human efficiency, creativity and innovation. Hence the creation of business environments designed to engender and support such teams is increasingly a major objective for businesses that want to remain competitive.

Maslow’s Hierarchy of Needs

Citation: Huitt, W. (2004). Maslow's hierarchy of needs. Educational Psychology
Abraham Maslow (1954) attempted to synthesize a large body of research related to human motivation. Prior to Maslow, researchers generally focused separately on such factors as biology, achievement, or power to explain what energizes, directs, and sustains human behavior. Maslow posited a hierarchy of human needs based on two groupings: deficiency needs and growth needs. Within the deficiency needs, each lower need must be met before moving to the next higher level. Once each of these needs has been satisfied, if at some future time a deficiency is detected, the individual will act to remove the deficiency. The first four levels are:

1) Physiological: hunger, thirst, bodily comforts, etc.;

2) Safety/security: out of danger;

3) Belonginess and Love: affiliate with others, be accepted; and

4) Esteem: to achieve, be competent, gain approval and recognition.

According to Maslow, an individual is ready to act upon the growth needs if and only if the deficiency needs are met. Maslow's initial conceptualization included only one growth need—self-actualization. Self-actualized people are characterized by:

1) being problem-focused;

2) incorporating an ongoing freshness of appreciation of life;

3) a concern about personal growth; and

4) the ability to have peak experiences.

Maslow later differentiated the growth need of self-actualization, specifically naming two lower-level growth needs prior to general level of self-actualization (Maslow & Lowery, 1998) and one beyond that level (Maslow, 1971). They are:

5) Cognitive: to know, to understand, and explore;

6) Aesthetic: symmetry, order, and beauty;

7) Self-actualization: to find self-fulfillment and realize one's potential; and

Self-transcendence: to connect to something beyond the ego or to help others find self-fulfillment and realize their potential.

Maslow’s basic position is that as one becomes more self-actualized and self-transcendent, one becomes more wise (develops wisdom) and automatically knows what to do in a wide variety of situations. Daniels (2001) suggests that Maslow’s ultimate conclusion that the highest levels of self-actualization are transcendent in their nature may be one of his most important contributions to the study of human behavior and motivation.

Norwood (1999) proposes that Maslow's hierarchy can be used to describe the kinds of information that individual's seek at different levels. For example, individuals at the lowest level seek coping information in order to meet their basic needs. Information that is not directly connected to helping a person meet his or her needs in a very short time span is simply left unattended. Individuals at the safety level need helping information. They seek to be assisted in seeing how they can be safe and secure. Enlightening information is sought by individuals seeking to meet their belongingness needs. Quite often this can be found in books or other materials on relationship development. Empowering information is sought by people at the esteem level. They are looking for information on how their ego can be developed. Finally, people in the growth levels of cognitive, aesthetic, and self-actualization seek edifying information. While Norwood does not specifically address the level of transcendence, I believe it safe to say that individuals at this stage would seek information on how to connect to something beyond themselves or to how others could be edified.

Maslow published his first conceptualization of his theory over 50 years ago (Maslow, 1943) and it has since become one of the most popular and often cited theories of human motivation. An interesting phenomenon related to Maslow's work is that in spite of a lack of evidence to support his hierarchy, it enjoys wide acceptance (Wahba & Bridgwell, 1976; Soper, Milford & Rosenthal, 1995).

The few major studies that have been completed on the hierarchy seem to support the proposals of William James (1892/1962) and Mathes (1981) that there are three levels of human needs. James hypothesized the levels of material (physiological, safety), social (belongingness, esteem), and spiritual. Mathes proposed the three levels were physiological, belongingness, and self-actualization; he considered security and self-esteem as unwarranted. Alderfer (1972) developed a comparable hierarchy with his ERG (existence, relatedness, and growth) theory. His approach modified Maslow's theory based on the work of Gordon Allport (1960, 1961) who incorporated concepts from systems theory into his work on personality.

Alderfer's Hierarchy of Motivational Needs

Maslow recognized that not all personalities followed his proposed hierarchy. While a variety of personality dimensions might be considered as related to motivational needs, one of the most often cited is that of introversion and extroversion. Reorganizing Maslow's hierarchy based on the work of Alderfer and considering the introversion/extroversion dimension of personality results in three levels, each with an introverted and extroverted component. This organization suggests there may be two aspects of each level that differentiate how people relate to each set of needs. Different personalities might relate more to one dimension than the other. For example, an introvert at the level of Other/Relatedness might be more concerned with his or her own perceptions of being included in a group, whereas an extrovert at that same level would pay more attention to how others value that membership.

A Reorganization of Maslow's and Alderfer's Hierarchies

At this point there is little agreement about the identification of basic human needs and how they are ordered. For example, Ryan & Deci (2000) also suggest three needs, although they are not necessarily arranged hierarchically: the need for autonomy, the need for competence, and the need for relatedness. Thompson, Grace and Cohen (2001) state the most important needs for children are connection, recognition, and power. Nohria, Lawrence, and Wilson (2001) provide evidence from a sociobiology theory of motivation that humans have four basic needs:

1. acquire objects and experiences;
2. bond with others in long-term relationships of mutual care and commitment;
learn and make sense of the world and of ourselves; and to defend ourselves, our loved ones, beliefs and resources from harm.

The Institute for Management Excellence (2001) suggests there are nine basic human needs:

(1) security,
(2) adventure,
(3) freedom,
(4) exchange,
(5) power,
(6) expansion,
(7) acceptance,
(8) community, and
(9) expression.

Notice that bonding and relatedness are a component of every theory. However, there do not seem to be any others that are mentioned by all theorists. Franken (2001) suggests this lack of accord may be a result of different philosophies of researchers rather than differences among human beings. In addition, he reviews research that shows a person’s explanatory or attributional style will modify the list of basic needs. Therefore, it seems appropriate to ask people what they want and how their needs could be met rather than relying on an unsupported theory. For example, Waitley (1996) advises having a person imagine what life would be like if time and money were not an object in a person’s life. That is, what would the person do this week, this month, next month, if he or she had all the money and time needed to engage in the activities and were secure that both would be available again next year. With some follow-up questions to identify what is keeping the person from happening now, this open-ended approach is likely to identify the most important needs of the individual.

There is much work still to be done in this area before we can rely on a theory to be more informative than simply collecting and analyzing data. However, this body of research can be very important to parents, educators, administrators and others concerned with developing and using human potential. It provides an outline of some important issues that must be addressed if human beings are to achieve the levels of character and competencies necessary to be successful in the information age.

In the grand design of things you secure an A just for effort. Where you lost everybody ended up being on the details. You know, it is said, the devil is in the details... And that could not be more accurate at this point. Having said that, permit me inform you exactly what did work. The writing is pretty powerful and that is most likely the reason why I am making an effort to opine. I do not really make it a regular habit of doing that. Secondly, while I can see a leaps in reason you come up with, I am definitely not confident of how you appear to connect your details that help to make your conclusion. For right now I will yield to your issue but hope in the near future you actually link your facts better.

I will investigate this problem. It was only a stroke of luck that I saw your comment because I receive so many Comments, which are attempts to get Free Advertising on my blog for things such as Viagra, ladies’ purses etc. So I don’t read comments anymore. However, my e-mail is scobrax@verizon.net.

I shall add this info to my future Posts! However, I will be unable to e-mail anyone with Comment updates. Thanks for your input. I’m sure others had the same problem!

SOPHISTRY In Politics! Supreme Court Rules NSA Bulk Spying Illegal! Democratic President Barack Obama & Republican Senator Marco Rubio Say,
Abraham Maslow's Hierarchy of Human Needs Theory is well famous among those who are familiar with the topic of Motivation in Psychology. It simplifies the most diverse world of human needs to just five levels, and through it, the theory enables one to accurately point out their own needs and channel their motivational energy into the right direction. Maslow's Theory of Motivation categorizes needs into five stages, with the bottom-most need demanding the most immediate satisfaction. The stages include: Physiological Needs. Maslow's hierarchy of needs was created by American psychologist Abraham Maslow in 1943. Maslow suggested that human needs could be put into five levels. The levels are in order of importance. Physiological needs. These include things breathing, food, water, and sleep. Safety. This includes things such as feeling physically safe in your environment. It includes feeling healthy. It includes feeling that you have enough money and supplies to keep you alive and well. What is Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs? What motivates people, what is their motive to do their work well and how can they be encouraged to perform even better? To get a better understanding of this process, the psychologist Abraham Maslow developed a Hierarchy of Needs model in 1934, in which he described five different levels of gratification of needs. The hierarchy of needs is known as Maslow Pyramid or theory of human behavior and is still used in the corporate sector. Levels of the Hierarchy of Needs. According to Abraham Maslow people are always motivated to satisfy their needs both at home
