It is fairly commonly believed by many atheists that the abolition of slavery was an inevitable product of the “Enlightenment” and progressive thinking. Yet this overlooks the fact that many key figures of the “Enlightenment” were firm advocates of slavery. Rodney Stark in his provocative book, For the Glory of God, outlines a series of influential Enlightenment figures who fully accepted slavery.