Policing Chinese Politics: A History

Abstract or Description

Beginning with the bloody communist purges of the Jiangxi era of the late 1920s and early 1930s and moving forward to the wild excesses of the Cultural Revolution, Policing Chinese Politics explores the question of revolutionary violence and the political passion that propels it. “Who are our enemies, who are our friends, that is a question germane to the revolution,” wrote Mao Zedong in 1926. Michael Dutton shows just how powerful this one line was to become. It would establish the binary division of life in revolutionary China and lead to both passionate commitment and revolutionary excess. The political history of revolutionary China, he argues, is largely framed by the attempts of Mao and the Party to harness these passions.

The economic reform period that followed Mao Zedong’s rule contained a hint as to how the magic spell of political faith and commitment could be broken, but the cost of such disenchantment was considerable. This detailed, empirical tale of Chinese socialist policing is, therefore, more than simply a police story. It is a parable that offers a cogent analysis of Chinese politics generally while radically redrafting our understanding of what politics is all about. Breaking away from the traditional elite modes of political analysis that focus on personalities, factions, and betrayals, and from “rational” accounts of politics and government, Dutton provides a highly original understanding of the far-reaching consequences of acts of faith and commitment in the realm of politics.

Item Type: Book

Additional Information: Winner, 2007 Joseph Levinson Book Prize

Keywords: China, police, class, communism, biopolitics

Departments, Centres and Research Units: Politics

Date: 2005

Item ID: 1881

Date Deposited: 12 Mar 2009 15:42
“[A]s a history of Chinese policing this book is a remarkable achievement and should be required reading on the subject for many years.” — Gregor Benton, Pacific Affairs. “Dutton’s history of Chinese law enforcement sets a new standard for research in this area. It is the most detailed and well-researched piece of scholarship to date on the subject.” — William Hurst, Asian Affairs. “Michael Dutton’s Policing Chinese Politics is a work of deeply committed political scholarship. It will be of great interest to scholars of Chinese politics and to historians and critics of the socialist movement.” — Piers Beirne, Department of Criminology, University of Southern Maine. China's Local Governance in Perspective: Instruments of Central Government Control. Chung. Grapes of Wrath: Twisting Arms to Get Villagers to Cooperate with Agribusiness in China. Luo et al. 1427 East 60th Street, Chicago, IL 60637.