Investors are rational agents, economists like to say. In other words, for the most part, we're not nuts. If IBM trades at $190 a share, Uncle Hank isn't going to offer his lot at $150 -- and if he does, it's time to talk to Aunt Lily about handling the stocks. More From Jack Hough. How to Make Money Off Analysts' Stock Picks. 3 Stocks That Could Start Dividends in 2012. 10 Stocks Analysts Say to Sell. That assumption makes it difficult to explain the behavior of closed-end funds. It's not uncommon for one that holds, say, $13 a share worth of stocks or bonds to sell f
