As Lorna falls across Freddy, and Bernadette, who grew up in a rainy village of one factory in upper New York, a schoolgirl toed and twisted into a witty and bold motor called a ballerina, lifts her leg comely—Sonia, red bandana holding down her raven oceanic hair, once on her toes in the Johannesburg Ballet Company, floats with elegant arch. Sonia’s fingers point down like swans piercing the lake with hungry eyes.
A Storm Is Blowing
By Brian Dillon
April 1, 2019

To Believe or Not to Believe: That Is Not the Question
By Peter Bebergal
March 29, 2019

The Benefits of Chronic Illness
By Tom Lee
March 28, 2019

Secrets of the Trade
By Anna Akhmatova
August 4, 2016
What’s Inspiration, Anyway?
By Dan Piepenbring
December 8, 2016

Staff Picks: Spells, Cephalopods, and Smug Salads
By The Paris Review
March 29, 2019

Staff Picks: Moscow, Misunderstandings, and Money Mark
By The Paris Review
March 22, 2019
Redux: Revelry
By The Paris Review  April 2, 2019

David McCullough, The Art of Biography No. 2
By David McCullough

FROM THE ARCHIVE, ISSUE 152
INTERVIEW

FROM THE ARCHIVE, ISSUE 152
INTERVIEW

NEWSLETTER
Sign up for the Paris Review newsletter and keep up with news, parties, readings, and more.

Enter email address

SIGN UP

EVENTS
Join the writers and staff of The Paris Review at our next event.

STORE
Visit our store to buy archival issues of the magazine, prints, T-shirts, and accessories.
This club on the banks of the Manzanares is a major player on the Madrid music scene and is ranked by many as the city’s best medium-sized venue. It’s certainly popular, and comes equipped with an excellent sound system. All manner of acts have passed through in recent times, among them Missy Elliot, Yo La Tengo, Bloc Party and Jet. Barrio de las Letras. For many years now, this beautiful venue with high ceilings and elegant decor has been the place to get your jazz fix in Madrid. The artists that come here put it among the best of its kind in Europe. George Adams, Don Pullen, Ben Sidran and Bob Sands have all taken the stage, as well as Spanish stalwarts such as Chano Domínguez, Jorge Pardo and the oldest and greatest of them all, Pedro Iturralde. Review of Madrid nightclubs that are popular in Madrid. Find directions to each night club, type of music and dress you can expect for each nightclub. This page contains a list of clubs that are popular on the Madrid nightclub scene. There’s also directions to save you time in looking for each club, and we’ve described the type of music and dress you can expect to find in each club. Staying Awake In Madrid. It's important to remember that a nightclub in Madrid won't get going until at least midnight, and most won't close until 06:00 or 07:00. People don't go out until at least 22:00 and even then, they will probably begin by eating tapas. It's this slow start to the night that helps them to stay awake all n I presently live in a large apartment on the West Side of New York City. One of those rooms is mine, and it’s an absolute hideaway, yet all around me in the other rooms the life of a family goes on, and I like to know that. I also like to know that twelve flights down I can step onto the street in the midst of a lot of human beings and feel a part of those. Whereas, in the old days, in New Mexico, I was brought up—taught—by Frieda Lawrence to see that simple manual endeavor is part of art. I would work in gardens and dig water ditches and walk in mountains and along rivers when I was not writi...