Difference between Conservative Party and Labour Party in England. Like many other countries, England has had a long and turbulent history marked by numerous political struggles and conflicts in ideology. The Conservative Party’s leader, David Cameron, is the current Prime Minister of Great Britain and the party holds 307 spots in the House of Commons. The Labour Party, on the other hand, is a center-left political party which first won over the Liberal Party in the general elections held in the early 1920s. The party was involved in a coalition during World War II, after which it assumed its first majority government role under the leadership of Clement Attlee.

Origins. The Conservative Party can trace its roots to the Tory Party, although it was founded in 1834. The Labour Party is a membership organization consisting of Constituency Labour Parties, affiliated trade unions, socialist societies, and the Co-operative Party, with which it has an electoral agreement. Members who are elected to parliamentary positions take part in the Parliamentary Labour Party (PLP) and European Parliamentary Labour Party (EPLP). The party’s decision-making bodies on a national level formally include the National Executive Committee (NEC), Labour Party Conference, and National Policy Forum (NPF). Although in practice the Parliamentary leadership has the final say on policy, the Labour Party is a centre-left political party in the United Kingdom that has been described as an alliance of social democrats, democratic socialists and trade unionists. The party’s platform emphasises greater state intervention, social justice and strengthening workers’ rights. The Labour Party was founded in 1900, having grown out of the trade union movement and socialist parties of the nineteenth century. It overtook the Liberal Party to become the main opposition to the Conservative Party in
