From Tibullus's palette of literary genres. Prayer and religious hymn as exponents of the poetic program of the elegiac poet.

Author(s): Aleksandra Arndt
Subject(s): Applied Linguistics, Studies of Literature
Published by: Uniwersytet Adama Mickiewicza
Keywords: Tibullus; love elegy; prayer; religious hymn; Tibullus.
Summary/Abstract: The article presents the analysis of hymns and prayers in the love elegies of Tibullus.

The poets of the English Renaissance focused on exploring religious and social ideas that their counterparts explored in art. English Renaissance is decadent, and often explores... religious themes with a completely different approach than the traditional religious poets. Another important characteristic of English Renaissance literature is humanism, or an optimistic outlook on humanity. Up until then, the more religiously dominated texts had a dimmer view of humans and their potential. English literature of the period may be characterized by the following features: - this period saw the rise of the political pamphlet and essay, but the leading genre of the Enlightenment became the novel. Poetry gave way to the prose age of the essayists and novelists. The prose style became dear, graceful and polished; -the hero of the novel was no longer a prince, but a representative of the middle class: that was new, because so far the common people had been depicted as comic characters; - literature became very instructive; writers tried to teach their readers what was good and what was b