Preserving the history of United States agriculture and rural life: state and local literature, 1820-1945; Ohio bibliography

Abstract:
The bibliography covers literature published in Ohio, 1820-1945, related to agriculture and rural life. The items listed in the bibliography were reviewed by a panel of scholars and ranked for preservation microfilming. The funding for this project was through a grant to the United States Agricultural Information Network (USAIN) and Cornell University by the National Endowment for the Humanities as part of a national program to preserve agricultural literature.

Contents:
Monographs Serials Dissertations and theses

Sponsors:
National Endowment for the Humanities
United States Agricultural Information Network
Cornell University

Type:
Technical Report

URI:
http://hdl.handle.net/1811/6519

Collections
Research and Publications (OARDC)
Research, Publications, and Presentations (Ohio State University Libraries)
The United States Agriculture Information Network and the National Agriculture Library developed the agricultural preservation project in 1993. Each state is expected to preserve its own local agricultural literature. Since 1996 over 30,000 volumes published between 1820 and 1945 have been saved. Some of the titles to be filmed over the next two years include the classic Livingston and the Tomato (1893), which contains descriptions and drawings of the varieties brought to life by A.W. Livingston, the Reynoldsburg tomato seed grower who was the best-known developer of tomato varieties in the Un... The Ohio State University. Help. BuckeyeLink. Preserving the history of United States agriculture and rural life: state and local literature, 1820-1945; Ohio bibliography. Britton, Constance J.; Logan, Susan J. (2004-07-10). The bibliography covers literature published in Ohio, 1820-1945, related to agriculture and rural life. The items listed in the bibliography were reviewed by a panel of scholars and ranked for preservation microfilming. What's Wrong With My Tomatoes? Answering Questions Collaboratively. Britton, Constance J.; Furbee, Robert; Logan, Susan J. (2005-06-28). Extension educators and librarians share a miss