The Royal College of Physicians is a British professional body dedicated to improving the practice of medicine, chiefly through the accreditation of physicians by examination. Founded in 1518, it set the first international standard in the classification of diseases, and its library contains medical texts of great historical interest. The college hosts four training faculties: the Faculty of Forensic and Legal Medicine, the Faculty for Pharmaceutical Medicine, the Faculty of Occupational Medicine and Report of a meeting of the United Services Section of the Royal Society of Medicine held at the Royal College of Surgeons on February 17 and 18, 1983. Authors: P S London. Data are provided on the methods of resuscitation and anaesthesia used. Suggestions are made for improving drugs and equipment for use in civil disaster or war. Read More. The Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (RCSI; Irish: Coláiste Ríoga na Máinleá in Éirinn) is a professional association and educational institution that is responsible for the medical speciality of surgery throughout the island of Ireland. Uniquely among the four mutually recognised royal surgical colleges in the United Kingdom and Ireland, it also incorporates a medical school, which is now Ireland’s largest with over 3,000 students from 60 countries.
