Excerpt
As one grows older it is the normal belief in society that they must transform into an adult. Contrary to this belief I prefer to remain in the simplistic, pure stage of childhood. For nineteen years now I have been perfecting my abilities of acting like a child. I would like to inform others of what it takes to be a kid, and remain joyful in a sorrow-filled society. The tasks are simple but they must be followed accurately. If any step is disregarded you will lose yourself and fall into the vile depths of adulthood. I have seen this happen to many of my friends and even to my family. Adulthood is a scary episode that will hold a person forever no matter how hard they try to escape.
