Résumé
This book on ornamented Jewish oil-lamps begins with an illustrated discussion of the development and use of the oil lamp in Palestine from the 4th millennium B.C. through the Bronze and Iron Ages into Classical times and up to the Arab Conquest. The main part of the publication deals with a group of lamps made during a 65-year period in the Flavian to Hadrianic period. The lamps seem to have been produced in limestone molds while in other parts of the Roman world lamp molds were made of plaster or clay. -- AATA
