Tourism in the Okavango Delta is based on the wildlife and delta environment. This is a very delicate environment and any small change can have huge effects. Despite the profits from tourism, there is still a lot of poverty. Is this because the money is not being spread evenly? Services that have been built e.g. airport and hotels are useful for tourists but not for local people. Some scientists say the delta has shrunk in recent years, this is blamed on more people moving to the area to take advantage of the tourism boom.
