Caring for a dog is a big responsibility, and dog ownership is not something to enter into lightly, however this work will help you to successfully build a bond of love and trust with an important new member of your family.[1]. Steps. Part 1. Cutting the quick could make your dog very, very resistant to nail trims in the future. Train your dog to associate nail trims with good things. Give your pup a treat after trimming or take it on a trip to the park. Most dogs enjoy the one-to-one attention of a training session and these sessions help the dog to bond with you. If you use reward-based training, in which only correct behavior is rewarded and no punishment is used, the experience of training will be a very happy and positive one for your pup.[10].
