Abstract

Primitive ballistic weapons are used in great numbers in Zululand, South Africa. Their manufacture reflects various degrees of skill. A case with a bullet and a cartridge in the victim is discussed, and a representative pictorial exhibition of weapons is presented.
Primitive ballistic weapons are used in great numbers in Zululand, South Africa. Their manufacture reflects various degrees of skill.

A case with a bullet and a cartridge in the victim is discussed, and a representative pictorial exhibition of weapons is presented. A steady increase in the murder rate was noted in the latter. BKK was the place where most killings occurred, but was probably related to the high number of extrajudicial executions. Of the victims, 86
