Transnational and crossdisciplinary programme for the prevention of violence against children in the home. The project aimed to intervene at a preventive level and through crises through multi-disciplinary exchange of methodologies and parenting skills workshops for parents and parents to be. In everyday life, psychological or sexual abuse are not the acts of a pathological violent personality, but social phenomena existing in normal families under certain circumstances (such as economic crises, events destabilizing life, excessive stress). The secret of primary prevention is to recognize and avoid problems before they materialize. This project set itself the goal to try and test new ways of public support in the frame of volunteer Social Welfare Services. Ending violence against women is everyone’s responsibility. United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-Moon in an interview on his world-wide UNiTE Campaign to End Violence against women (2010). Violence against women and girls (VAW) is one of the most rampant human rights violations. According to United Nations estimates, one in three women world-wide has experienced physical or sexual violence because she is a woman. Violence is a major obstacle to women’s and girls’ development, and to the welfare and development of their communities and societies as a whole. Several binding human rights
