A land without a people: Israel, transfer and the Palestinians 1949-96

Abstract

"Transfer" - a euphemism denoting the organized removal of the Arab population of Palestine to neighbouring or distant countries - is deeply rooted in Zionism. Palestine, in Zionist thought, is "a land without a people for a people without a land" - a vacant territory waiting for settlers, with Palestinian residents who are not attached to the land by historical or cultural ties.

More information

Item Type: Book
Date Deposited: 02 May 2014 14:54
URI: http://research.stmarys.ac.uk/id/eprint/691

Download

Full text not available from this repository.

Export and Share

Statistics

Downloads from St Mary's University Open Research Archive

View details
We should be pro-Israeli and pro-Palestinian and ultimately pro-human flourishing. A Land without a People for a People without a Land? After the Holocaust, which is arguably the worst example of human evil in history, Jewish survivors were refugees. With energy for a Zionist (Christian and non-Christian alike) cause having emerged alongside secularist ideologies and Dispensationalism, the U.N. invited the Jewish survivors to inhabit the ancient land of Palestine. Arguably, this was in part due to the lack of hospitality from other nations who didn't want a “refugee problem.” By 1948 (shortly