a. Title The novel is titled "A Man of Property".
b. Point of View The writer of the novel used the third person point of view. It can be seen at how he told the reader about the living of the main character, Philip Bossiney (a buccaneer). He told about the living of Bossiney and the forsytes (a polite family), Mr. Soam, Mr. Old and Young Jolyon, Irene, June, Mr. James, so on. However, the novel also contains the Dramatic Point of View and Omniscient Point of View. Because of the beauty of his wife and also the limit place for his good paintings in his painting room of his home, he then decides to build a fine home in the country. He wants to make a great home for Irene and his paintings. - The Plans of the House. Many men were unable to conquer her beauty and wisdom, yet when trying to win the beauty, they cannot let go of their plundering desires in lust for power. Within the imperial court, there is an underlying turbulence of disputing fronts. On the battlefield, there is the slaughtering of armoured cavalry; the tender grace of a beauty, hearts fuelled with lust for power, which is it that is the burial of such heroes? I keep my expectations very, very low when reading Chinese light novels. But Chaos of Beauty is difficult to swallow even with lowered expectations. The core problem is that this novel is ruled by a perversion of ethics, which is made further outrageous by willful romanticization.
