Description

Westmoreland County is located on the Northern Neck Peninsula of the Eastern portion of the Commonwealth of Virginia. While not clear, it is possible the name was taken from Westmoreland, England similar to its sister county in Pennsylvania.

Westmoreland County, Virginia History

Many colonial settlers who gained prominence in America arrived in Westmoreland County, Virginia as immigrants during the mid 1600s. These wealthy Westmoreland planters had the money to purchase the labor of indentured servants imported from the British Isles. In the early eighteenth century, historians estimate that Westmoreland had more English transported convicts serving labor terms within its bounds, than any other Virginia county. Hence, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the area became the first home to many poor immigrants, before they moved to frontier areas to stake out cheap land.

Parent County

1653—Westmoreland County was created 5 July 1653 from Northumberland County. County seat: Montross

Boundary Changes

In 1662, Westmoreland County and Northumberland County were temporarily joined into a single county. For animated maps illustrating Virginia county boundary changes, "Rotating Formation Virginia County Boundary Maps" (1617-1995) may be viewed for free at the MapofUS.org website.

Variant Spellings

- Westmorland

Record Loss

Courthouse loose papers were burned during both the American Revolutionary War and during the American Civil War. Volumes that record deeds, court orders (except for an order book for the period 1764–1776), and wills exist.

- Some wills from the 1600s are lost
- Lost federal censuses: 1790, 1800, 1890
