There are many reasons why a cookie could not be set correctly. Below are the most common reasons:

- You have cookies disabled in your browser. You need to reset your browser to accept cookies or to ask you if you want to accept cookies.
- Your browser asks you whether you want to accept cookies and you declined. To accept cookies from this site, use the Back button and accept the cookie.
- Your browser does not support cookies. Try a different browser if you suspect this.
- The date on your computer is in the past. If your computer's clock shows a date before 1 Jan 1970, the browser will automatically forget the cookie. To fix this, set the correct time and date on your computer.
- You have installed an application that monitors or blocks cookies from being set. You must disable the application while logging in or check with your system administrator.

Why Does this Site Require Cookies?

This site uses cookies to improve performance by remembering that you are logged in when you go from page to page. To provide access without cookies would require the site to create a new session for every page you visit, which slows the system down to an unacceptable level.

What Gets Stored in a Cookie?

This site stores nothing other than an automatically generated session ID in the cookie; no other information is captured.

Person with mental retardation have been found to produce genuine artistic works, even if it is at an infantile level, such limitations are not, however reasons for short —circuiting the full creative process, and they benefit equally from art experiences as stated by Dailey (1992). Methodology. A total of six randomly selected pupils made up the final sample population. At this stage of art teaching activities, the matching warm-up exercise was being practiced repeatedly in variety of ways. This exercise involved differentiating between visual images in other to select identical shapes and forms, enabling children to be visually alert to combinations of elements, and therefore making counting of elements compulsory.  Introduction to mental retardation. Engiewood cliffs. NJ: prentice Hall.